

M.A. IN PHILOSOPHY

The Department of Philosophy offers a program of study leading to the degree of M.A. in Philosophy. Its orientation is primarily in the direction of contemporary philosophy, both European and Anglo-American. Training is provided through formal seminars and thesis supervision. Enrollment is deliberately restricted to ensure the possibility of frequent and meaningful contact between the student and his professors. One of the central aims of this program is to provide the level of rigorous training which should well prepare the student for subsequent work at the doctoral level. Both a thesis option and a research paper option are offered.

Courses are scheduled in the late afternoon and evening to accommodate both full-time and part-time students.

Admission Requirements

Applicants should hold an honours degree in philosophy or its equivalent. Moreover, they may be required to take up to two prerequisite courses in areas in which they are deemed to be deficient. Candidates who lack the normal entrance qualifications in philosophy may be admitted to a qualifying program which is normally one academic year.

Faculty

Professor and Chairman of the Department,
Dallas Laskey, Ph.D. (Harvard)

Professors
Roger B. Angel, Ph.D. (McGill)
Stanley G. French, Ph.D. (Virginia)
Andrew Kawczak, Ph.D. (Warsaw)

Associate Professors
M. Mobin Ahmad, Ph.D. (Chicago)
Christine Allen, Ph.D. (Claremont)
Edmund J. Egan, Ph.D. (Fordham)
Jack Omstein, Ph.D. (California - San Diego)
Martin Reidy, Ph.D. (Toronto)
Vladimir Zeman, Ph.D. (Prague)
Graduate Program Director

Assistant Professors
Sheila Mullett, Ph.D. (Purdue)
Franz Oppacher, Ph.D. (University of Vienna)

Financial Assistance

Students interested in financial assistance in the form of scholarships, teaching assistantships or employment as conference leaders should apply to the Department.

Allocations up to a maximum of $3,500 are available.

Information and Application

Requests for more detailed information and application forms should be addressed to:
Dr. V. Zeman
Graduate Program Director,
Department of Philosophy,
Sir George Williams Campus,
Concordia University,
Montréal, Québec.
H3G 1M8

Applications received by March 31, 1977 will receive priority consideration.